THE COUNCIL,

HAVING REGARD to Article 5 b) of the Convention on the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development of 14 December 1960;

HAVING REGARD to the Report by the Committee on Financial Markets with respect to Minimum Disclosure and Procedure Rules to be Complied with before Securities may be Offered to the Public [C(75)198];

CONSIDERING that there is a need in Member countries for standard rules on the nature and extent of information concerning the issuers of securities to be sold to the public and concerning such securities, and on the methods of publication of such information as well as on a prior review of the information by competent authorities as to proper compliance with the stipulated requirements;

CONSIDERING, however, that under such standard rules, to the extent that the investor's interests are not thereby prejudiced, and unless a conflict with existing laws would be created thereby, the competent authorities, whose task it is to ensure compliance with these rules, should be endowed with powers to make more stringent or to modify in individual cases the stipulated requirements concerning the specified information;

CONSIDERING, finally, that the existence of such standard rules in Member countries would assist the protection of the investor; promote public confidence in issuers of securities and in the securities industry; serve the co-ordination of methods and facilities for raising capital and for trading in securities; and thereby contribute to a progressive development of capital markets, both nationally and internationally;

On the proposal of the Committee on Financial Markets:

I. TAKES NOTE of the Minimum Disclosure and Procedure Rules to be Complied with before Securities may be Offered to the Public, which appear in the Report referred to above and which will be known as the "OECD Minimum Disclosure Rules".

II. RECOMMENDS that each Member country should review its relevant existing provisions laid down by law, regulation or administrative action as well as the relevant rules or other provisions of autonomous or semi-autonomous bodies recognised by that Member country in the light of the OECD Minimum Disclosure Rules and take, as and when appropriate, the steps required to bring all such provisions into line with these Minimum Disclosure Rules.

III. RECOMMENDS that, as a further measure promoting confidence in national and international capital markets, Member countries should adopt the measures needed to ensure that with regard to public offerings of securities adequate remedies against misrepresentation including rights of individual action by injured investors, are available to all investors irrespective of their domicile or permanent residence.

IV. RECOMMENDS Member countries to ensure that their competent authorities maintain contact with each other with a view to achieving compliance with the OECD Minimum Disclosures Rules internationally as well as to reaching full mutual understanding of the methods used in each Member country to implement these Rules.

V. INSTRUCTS the Committee on Financial Markets to review the implementation of this Recommendation before the end of 1977 and to report thereon to the Council in due course.

About the OECD

The OECD is a unique forum where governments work together to address the economic, social and environmental challenges of globalisation. The OECD is also at the forefront of efforts to understand and to help governments respond to new developments and concerns, such as corporate governance, the information economy and the challenges of an ageing population. The Organisation provides a setting where governments can compare policy experiences, seek answers to common problems, identify good practice and work to co-ordinate domestic and international policies.

The OECD Member countries are: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Chile, the Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, Korea, Latvia, Luxembourg, Mexico, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Poland, Portugal, the Slovak Republic, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, the United Kingdom and the United States. The European Union takes part in the work of the OECD.

OECD Legal Instruments

Since the creation of the OECD in 1961, around 450 substantive legal instruments have been developed within its framework. These include OECD Acts (i.e. the Decisions and Recommendations adopted by the OECD Council in accordance with the OECD Convention) and other legal instruments developed within the OECD framework (e.g. Declarations, international agreements).

All substantive OECD legal instruments, whether in force or abrogated, are listed in the online Compendium of OECD Legal Instruments. They are presented in five categories:

- Decisions: OECD legal instruments which are legally binding on all Members except those which abstain at the time of adoption. While they are not international treaties, they entail the same kind of legal obligations. Adherents are obliged to implement Decisions and must take the measures necessary for such implementation.
- Recommendations: OECD legal instruments which are not legally binding but practice accords them great moral force as representing the political will of Adherents. There is an expectation that Adherents will do their utmost to fully implement a Recommendation. Thus, Members which do not intend to do so usually abstain when a Recommendation is adopted, although this is not required in legal terms.
- Declarations: OECD legal instruments which are prepared within the Organisation, generally within a subsidiary body. They usually set general principles or long-term goals, have a solemn character and are usually adopted at Ministerial meetings of the Council or of committees of the Organisation.
- International Agreements: OECD legal instruments negotiated and concluded within the framework of the Organisation. They are legally binding on the Parties.
- Arrangement, Understanding and Others: several ad hoc substantive legal instruments have been developed within the OECD framework over time, such as the Arrangement on Officially Supported Export Credits, the International Understanding on Maritime Transport Principles and the Development Assistance Committee (DAC) Recommendations.
